Learn about the benefits of native plants, their importance to the green industry, and practical approaches to sustainable landscaping. Discover new ways to integrate sustainable "green" ideas into widespread traditional practices. From the keynote address to the twenty-minute "TED Talks" to the garden tour, spend the day at this exciting symposium exploring a world of native plants that are both beautiful and ecologically important!

One of the world's most distinguished horticulturists, Allan M. Armitage is a professor at the University of Georgia, Athens, where he teaches, conducts research on new garden plants, and runs the University of Georgia Horticulture Gardens. Charming and lively as well as highly knowledgeable, Dr. Armitage is in constant demand as a speaker and has lectured worldwide.
